BODDINGTON PROJECT - CONTRACT SIGNED

Clough Limited (ASX: CLO) as part of a joint venture has today signed a contract for the Boddington Gold Mine expansion project securing revenue of around A$115 million to the joint venture.

The contract involves the Engineering, Procurement and Construction Management (EPCM) of gold and copper processing facilities, capable of handling 35 million tonnes of ore per annum.

The contracted entity is an unincorporated joint venture between Aker Kvaerner Australia and Clough Murray & Roberts (AKCMR Joint Venture).

David Singleton, CEO and Managing Director of Clough Limited said, "Clough, Murray & Roberts and Aker Kvaerner have the skills to deliver what is one of the world's largest gold plants, located in Western Australia. For Clough, this is the product of our commitment to deliver world class minerals projects in conjunction with Murray & Roberts. We are also pleased to be working again with Aker Kvaerner with whom we have had a good delivery record in the past."

The Boddington Project is located approximately 130km south east of Perth in Western Australia. The development of the project will run for approximately three years with production expected in late 2008.

The project owner, Boddington Gold Mine Management Company, is a joint venture between Newmont Mining Corporation (66 per cent) and AngloGold Ashanti Limited (33 per cent).
